Describe means of obtaining groundwater without a well:

"as by sub-irrigation and other natural processes." Include depth to water when applicable.

Water was obtained and conserved by digging out a sump hole in a spring site to a depth of approximately 4 to 5 feet. The water source was from a spring which flowed only about 20 rods from spring site before again sinking into ground.

Quantity of water developed and used with explanation of method used to measure or estimate such amount. If use is intermittent estimate approximate lengths of periods of use. Approximately ten to twenty barrels would accumulate in the sump hole. The water was used for watering stock at the spring site from at least 1936 to 1960 and was also used for domestic purposes and watering stock after being hauled from spring site from 1936 to 1947, although these uses over this period, 1936 to 1947, were not continuous.
